To work with Canada students is a big challenge to me. Especially the group mates in Introduction to Wines and Women's Issues: Sexuality, Class, and Ethnicity. My four group mates came from different filed of study. The age range is from 19 to 65. They are Christine, (young mother with girl aged at 4) Jenny, (a grandmother having 2 grandchildren), Ashley (Politics undergraduate student) and me. They are very nice people and friendly. We had an informal meeting once a week to have a casual chat or discussion of the progress of project. Finally, I got a Grade A from this course.

Tasting wine during winery visit

The introduction of Wine is the most of difficult courses I have ever studied in University. The course is about study the process of production wine, the history of wines in different countries, a individual project and tasting different wine during the laboratory once a week. The course schedule is a 2 hour lecture and 2 hour laboratory per week. Because we need to taste different wines during the laboratory, so it required students must be a minimum of 18 years of age and a material fee of $1000 in Hong Kong dollars. I have tasted red wines, white wines, and ice wine, Champagne, Shelly and Porto.....For my individual study; I need to visit a local winery to have deep investigation on the process of making wines and study of grapes. This course really offered an exclusive opportunity for me to have learnt different field of knowledge.

The extra curricular activities

A. Grape Stomp Extravaganza-September 21, 2007

My team members in Grape Stomp Competition

We are in the headline of Brock University Web site.

The grape Stomp Extravaganza is organized by Brock University, Canada. It is an annual campus tradition. It aims to celebrate the official start of Brock Days; the activities included annual Kick off BBQ and Grape Stomp Extravaganza. It is the unique opportunity to dress up and participate in the fun, all in celebration of Brock as the participants need to gather their own teams and design the costumes. We have enjoyed a BBQ lunch and entertainment followed by the Grape Stomp Extravaganza at that day. We really had a lot of fun!

B. FB Etiquette dinner- November 27, 2007

FB Etiquette dinner is organized by Faculty Business, Brock University, Canada at first time. I am so lucky to be one of the participants. This event is designed to educate students on proper business etiquette when dining out. Today's employers are incorporating food and beverage in many of their recruiting strategies; including employer information sessions, on-site visits and orientations, and off-site interviews. This event demonstrates how to order from the menu, what menu items to choose, and how to choose the right topic of conversation.

C. the celebration of Nations

The Celebration of Nations is a multicultural fair, where people of all nationalities get's a chance expose their culture and country to the Brock community. We promote Hong Kong and City University of Hong Kong through this event. I co-operated with other City University students to design the booth and advertise City University and Hong Kong to other students from different countries.
