About the Department of Management Sciences

The Department of Management Sciences at the City University of Hong Kong is noted for its strong academic programmes. Most of the staff obtained their doctoral degrees from prominent universities in USA, Canada, UK and Australia. Together, they have many years of local and overseas experience in teaching and consulting. The size and the activities of its staff have made the Department one of the largest departments of management sciences in the Asia-Pacific region. The Department has three main functions: teaching, research and professional services. In all three areas, the work carried out is business oriented, with an emphasis on practical application of quantitative skills.

The teaching and degree programmes offered by the Department are wide ranging, and emphasize the applications of quantitative techniques in a very broad sense. It produces graduates who are well received by local business organizations, testified by the positions held by past graduates. The staff's superior teaching skills are well recognized and the Department has won three Teaching Excellence Awards presented by the University.

Campus Internship Scheme (CIS)

Introduction

To better consolidate students' work-based learning experience and to enhance their professional and personal development on campus, a Task Force chaired by the Vice-President (Student Affairs) has conducted a review of the On-campus Service-learning Scheme (OSS) in October 2011 and has recommended the introduction of two new schemes, namely the Campus Internship Scheme (CIS) and the Campus Work Scheme (CWS), for implementation on 1st July 2012 to replace the OSS.

Starting from 1 July 2020, CWS will cease to be implemented so that the hiring and management of student helpers will be decentralized for the Recruiting Units, while CLC will continue to manage CIS.

All enquiries on CIS and suggestions may be forwarded directly to the Career and Leadership Centre via email at clc.careercentre@cityu.edu.hk.

Programme Objectives (CIS)

- To enhance students' understanding of the work environment and their long term personal and professional development
- To develop students' analytical, problem-solving, and interpersonal skills to engage in discovery and innovation
- To facilitate students' career exploration and add value to their employability.

Student Mentoring Scheme (SMS)

The purposes of SMS are:

- To help first-year students adjust to university education;
- To develop a supportive personal network amongst first-year students and senior students;
- To create a warm atmosphere and positive academic culture in the campus;
- To assist first-year students in enhancing their educational experience and development as a person and as a professional in their chosen fields of study.

The scopes of SMS are:

- The range of activities can be very comprehensive, from educational to entertaining, personal to professional;
- The student mentors can assume very flexibly the roles of big brother / sister, adviser, information-provider, counselor, coach or private tutor, or simply friend;
- The types of activities and relationship really depend on the needs of the first-year students and their chemistry with the mentors.

Industrial Mentoring Scheme (IMS)

Our Mentorship Program aims at establishing a caring and supportive relationship between City University alumni, business executives (mentors) and undergraduates (mentees) to achieve the following objectives:

- To facilitate the educational, social and personal growth of mentees
- To develop mentees' fullest potential, vision and aspirations for the future
- To enhance mentees' future professional and career development
- To empower mentees to face challenges in society

A mentoring relationship is one that encourages discussion, questions and feedback regarding those areas that will enhance the mentees' capabilities/competencies. These capabilities may be job related, but may also be in the area of school or life in general.

How does the mentorship program work?

The mentor and the mentee would agree on the level of commitment, mode and frequency of interaction, as well as the preferred focus through the mentorship process. Each mentor is encouraged to take on one to three mentees during the same period. At least one face to face meeting is highly recommended. Other activities can be arranged depending on individual mentors and mentees such as:

- regular contact through phone or email
- campus visits by mentors
- workplace visits by mentees
- leisure and social activities
