1. Prepare and develop students for a career in human resource management.
2. Provide students with knowledge of the central functions of human resource management.
3. Produce graduates with generic skills in learning, interpersonal interaction, effective communication, working individually and in teams.
4. Enhance students' creativity, emotional intelligence, and business etiquette.
5. Enable students to apply critical thinking in human resource management and demonstrate sensitivity to cross-cultural issues.
6. Develop students' practical skills in key areas of people management and technical skills required of a generalist, a specialist, or a consultant in human resource management.

1. Equip students with the knowledge and skills to develop effective corporate strategies.
2. Allow students to understand how firms operate internationally and gain an in-depth understanding of developing and implementing strategy and managerial activities related to cross-border business activities.
3. Enable students to understand different elements and pathways of entrepreneurship and develop skills to conduct strategic entrepreneurship analysis in various contexts.
4. Help students assess how firms from emerging markets can expand and compete internationally, especially in the increasingly important Asia Pacific region.
5. Equip students with the analytical skills to write up a business proposal in the organization.

CityUHK offers various university-wide scholarships, and the MGT Department also provides additional dedicated scholarship opportunities.

Management Internship

Management Internship Program is designed to enhance student learning through work experience in industry. This departmental program is a credit-bearing major elective course for second-year and/or third-year students of Department of Management. Successfully placed students, after interviews, will normally work in an organization for a period of six to twelve weeks, between June and August. Placements will be either through companies introduced by the Department or students can look for their own internship.

Exchange Opportunities

York University, Canada

Afreen BHAT

"I thoroughly enjoyed the interactive nature of the course, from cunning tactics in negotiations to discussions about career development and job environment differences. This exchange journey nurtured my personal development and ignited career aspirations, especially with final-year students surrounding my academic experience."

Institut d'Études
Politiques de Paris
(Sciences Po),
France

Zita LAM

"Beyond the croissants and champagne, this journey taught me independence and adaptability while showing me how to connect across cultures. In simple moments-like a Parisian baker patiently explaining the art of French pastries-I gained my most profound insights. Exchange isn't just about studying abroad; it's about discovering yourself through new experiences that reshape how you see the world."

National University of Singapore

Riley NGAI

"I am grateful for the lifelong friendships I forged, the rich local culture I explored, and the profound personal development I experienced. This exchange has instilled a more positive and proactive outlook, providing a comprehensive foundation for my future growth. Overall, it was an enriching adventure that I will cherish forever."

Aston University, United Kingdom

Rebi SIT

"The study mode in the UK encourages critical and independent thinking, allowing me to comprehend global issues. The exchange program also taught me invaluable life skills, including adaptability, communication, and cultural awareness. These skills are essential to prepare for my career in an increasingly globalized world. This exchange enriched my academic journey and shaped my identity, and I enthusiastically encourage others to embrace this exciting opportunity for growth and discovery."

Embarking on the BBA journey at the esteemed Department of Management was a strategic choice, one that has been instrumental in shaping my professional trajectory. This program, distinguished as one of the select few in Hong Kong known for cultivating proficient human resources professionals, boasts an exceptional reputation amongst industry employers.

The Department's commitment to delivering high-caliber education allowed me to establish a robust academic groundwork that became a cornerstone of my success. It didn't merely end with theoretical knowledge; the program's comprehensive career support, encompassing internships and a robust mentoring initiative, equipped me with the necessary skills to navigate the dynamic landscape of the workplace and tackle challenges head-on.

In retrospect, I am immensely grateful for this enriching educational journey. It was not just a stepping stone to my career but a catalyst that propelled me towards significant career advancement post-graduation. Today, as a senior HR leader, I reflect back on these experiences with a sense of pride and acknowledge the pivotal role the BBA program played in my professional ascent.

In today's business world, Human Resources Management has evolved from a mere support function to a more strategic and advisory role. As a HR consultant, I partner with HR Leaders to solve strategic problems and create a better working world. At CityU, the Department of Management enabled me to develop essential skills and gain a well-rounded education before entering the workforce. With their support, I was able to explore my career goals and enhance my abilities to adapt to the constantly evolving world.

This has greatly benefitted me in the early stages of my career.

I would say Strategy and International Management has two strategic important pillars that would educate each of the students upon graduation. The first pillar will be "Corporate Social Responsibility" where each of the student will be equipped with the knowledge and technical skills that help corporates to accelerate their transition towards net zero emission.

Another strategic pillar would be training up how students actually think. Unique courses such as "Advanced Strategic Analysis" is able to provide students one of the rare experiences and learning opportunity to actually think from senior management's perspective and help them to break down complex organizational issues and lay down a solid foundation for their career development.

I recently graduated with a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration, specializing in Human Resource Management. During my time at the university, I gained extensive theoretical knowledge and practical application in HRM, which opened up a path for me to secure five remarkable internships, two of which were at Big Four firms and the other three at leading banks.

Not only did I learn the textbook knowledge, but the program also taught me the real-world application and situations I would encounter, which instilled me with a great deal of confidence. Even before completing my degree, I had received several job offers waiting for me. I am now incredibly excited to embark on my next chapter.
